

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

DISTRICT OF NEVADA

REDA A. GINENA et al.,

Plaintiffs,

vs.

ALASKA AIRLINES, INC.,

Defendant.

2:04-cv-01304-RCJ-CWH

ORDER

This case arises out of an altercation on an international passenger flight. Pending before the Court is a Motion for Certificate of Appealability (ECF No. 157). For the reasons given herein, the Court denies the motion.

I. FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The nine Plaintiffs in this case are citizens of Canada, Germany, and Egypt who on September 29, 2003 were traveling with Defendant Alaska Airlines, Inc. (“AA”), a Washington corporation, from Vancouver to Las Vegas in order to attend an energy industry convention. About one hour into the flight, the pilot diverted the plane to Reno after a flight attendant informed him that she had lost control of the passengers. Security officials at the Reno Airport cleared Plaintiffs to continue and indicated they were not a security threat, but the pilot refused to fly with them onboard, so they were removed. Plaintiffs allege that they were not unruly and made no threats, but that the flight crew treated them poorly because of its perception of their Arab ethnicity and Muslim religion. The diversion caused Plaintiffs to miss important business opportunities. Furthermore, Plaintiffs allege that the pilot and other employees of AA defamed

1 them by reporting them to the authorities, contacting another airline in a failed attempt to prevent 2 them from traveling on that airline, and made defamatory announcements over the public address
3 system of the plane to the remaining passengers after Plaintiffs were forced to disembark.

4 The Amended Complaint (“AC”) lists five causes of action. The Court dismissed all 5 claims as preempted by the Warsaw Convention, except of course the first claim under the 6 Warsaw Convention itself, and later granted summary judgment to Defendant against the 7 Warsaw Convention claim. The Court of Appeals affirmed in part, reversed in part, and 8 remanded. The court reversed summary judgment on the Warsaw Convention claim, ruling that 9 the reasonableness of the pilot’s actions could not be determined on summary judgment. The 10 court affirmed dismissal of the state law claims except as to the defamation claim insofar as the 11 claim arose out of conduct that occurred after Plaintiffs departed the aircraft, which conduct was 12 outside the scope of the Warsaw Convention’s preemptive force. The court therefore remanded 13 for trial on the Warsaw Convention claim and any defamation claims arising after Plaintiffs 14 departed the aircraft. The Court of Appeals also affirmed the Court’s denial of Plaintiffs’ motion
15 to amend the complaint under Rule 15(d), but noted that the Court should consider amendment 16 to add more defamation claims under Rule 15(a) if Plaintiffs so moved. The court noted that 17 even though the two-year statute of limitations may have run on these new defamation claims, 18 the question of equitable tolling should not be decided on dispositive motion in this case but 19 should be put to the jury as an affirmative defense.

20 Plaintiffs moved to amend the AC to add new defamation claims. The Court denied the 21 motion. Plaintiffs have now moved for a certificate of appealability pursuant to 28 U.S.C.
22 § 1292(b).

23 II. LEGAL STANDARDS

24 A court of appeals may grant interlocutory appellate review of an issue without staying 25 proceedings below when a district judge notes in the relevant order that he believes such review

1 is merited:

2           When a district judge, in making in a civil action an order not otherwise 3           appealable under this section, shall be of the opinion that such order involves a 4           controlling question of law as to which there is substantial ground for difference of 5           opinion and that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the 6           ultimate termination of the litigation, he shall so state in writing in such order. The 7           Court of Appeals which would have jurisdiction of an appeal of such action may thereupon, in its discretion, permit an appeal to be taken from such order, if application is made to it within ten days after the entry of the order: Provided, however, That application for an appeal hereunder shall not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district judge or the Court of Appeals or a judge thereof shall so order.

8 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). A district court cannot itself grant interlocutory review under this statute.

9 A court of appeals may do so in its discretion, but only if the district court's order contains the 10 required language. See id. The "certificate of appealability" sought is an amendment to the 11 Court's order denying leave to amend, to the effect that the order involves a controlling question 12 of law as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion and that an immediate 13 appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.

14 III. ANALYSIS

15           Plaintiffs moved to add defamation claims arising out of the following post-debarkation 16 conduct: the filing of a criminal complaint against Plaintiffs; an email from AA's director of 17 security to other AA managers concerning the incident; emails from an AA "executive" and an 18 AA "management employee" to other AA employees concerning the incident; and the 19 publication of information concerning the incident in an AA newsletter distributed to its pilots.
20 The Court denied the motion.

21           First, the Court found that Plaintiffs had admitted facts indicating that the statute of 22 limitations ran on any defamation claim arising out of AA's criminal complaint when they 23 alleged that they were arrested within days based upon that criminal complaint. (See Proposed 24 Second Am. Compl. ("PSAC") ¶ 34, June 4, 2011, ECF No. 138-1). The Court reasoned that 25 Plaintiffs could not rely on the discovery rule to toll the statute of limitations in such

1 circumstances. And because this admission of facts appeared on the face of the PSAC, no
2 further fact-finding was necessary to resolve the issue. See Hyatt Chalet Motels, Inc. v.
3 Carpenters Local 1065, 430 F.2d 1119, 1120 (9th Cir. 1970). In the present motion, Plaintiffs
4 make no attempt to address the Court's reasoning but baldly assert that the certification 5 requirements are satisfied. And even assuming arguendo that equitable tolling applied, the 6 Court previously dismissed the defamation claim insofar as it arose out of the criminal complaint
7 as preempted by the Warsaw Convention, because the claim arose out of pre-disembarkation 8 conduct under the Ninth Circuit's "total circumstances" test announced in Maugnie v.
9 Compagnie Nationale Air France, 549 F.2d 1256 (9th Cir. 1977). (See Order, June 20, 2005, 10 ECF No. 42; Mot. Dismiss 5–7, Feb. 23, 2005, ECF No. 31). The Court of Appeals affirmed in 11 this regard based on its interpretation of the Warsaw Convention and its construction of the 12 Warsaw and Tokyo Conventions. See Eid v. Alaska Airlines, Inc., 621 F.3d 858, 873 (9th Cir.
13 2010) ("It is thus fair to say that the pilot's statements to the police were part of the 14 disembarkation process. Considering 'the total circumstances surrounding [plaintiffs'] injuries, 15 viewed against the background of the intended meaning of Article 17,' we conclude that the 16 crew's report to the police was covered by the Warsaw Convention." (alteration in original) 17 (citation omitted)). Therefore, regardless of whether the limitations period for such a claim 18 could be equitably tolled, Plaintiffs should not have attempted to revive this aspect of their 19 defamation claim in their motion to amend.

20 Second, the Court noted that intra-corporate statements simply do not constitute 21 "publications" under Nevada's defamation law. See Simpson v. Mars Inc., 929 P.2d 966, 967–68
22 (Nev. 1997). Although this doctrine is an affirmative defense in Nevada, see id. at 968, the 23 affirmative defense appeared on the face of the PSAC in each circumstance, (see PSAC ¶¶ 48, 24 54, 60, 66, 71), so no further fact-finding was necessary to resolve the issue, see Hyatt Chalet
25 Motels, Inc., 430 F.2d at 1120. Again, Plaintiffs make no attempt to address the Court's

1 reasoning but simply assert that the certification requirements are satisfied. The Court will not 2 certify this issue.

3       The Simpson Court's demand for further fact-finding concerning the intra-corporate 4 nature of the alleged defamatory statements was born of the particular circumstances of that case.
5 Simpson worked directly for Kelly Temporary Services ("Kelly"), which assigned her to a 6 chocolate factory, Ethel M. Chocolates ("Ethel M."), a subsidiary of Mars. Simpson, 929 P.2d at 7 967. Simpson's supervisor at Kelly later informed Simpson of her termination from Kelly based 8 on reports that Simpson had sexually harassed a co-worker at Ethel M. Id. The Nevada Supreme 9 Court affirmed the trial court's dismissal of all of Simpson's claims against Mars except the 10 claim for defamation, because the intra-corporate nature of the alleged defamatory statements 11 was unclear. See id. at 968 ("The circumstances of the communication of the allegedly 12 defamatory material are uniquely within the knowledge of the corporation and its agents. It is 13 unfair to put the burden on the plaintiff to determine and allege the circumstances of 14 communication within the corporation before she can make a prima facie case. Therefore, the 15 circumstances of communication are more appropriately an element of the defense to an action
16 of defamation rather than an element of the plaintiff's prima facie case."). In Simpson, Kelly
17 terminated Simpson not just from the Ethel M. assignment but as a Kelly employee altogether, 18 see id. at 967, because of communications by Ethel M. to Kelly. It was a question of fact 19 whether such communications were "intra-corporate." Although Simpson had not specifically 20 pled extra-corporate communications, the likelihood that the subject communications were in 21 fact purely intra-corporate were impossibly small. After all, if the communications had been 22 made purely within Ethel M., then Kelly, an outside agency with no corporate relation to either 23 Ethel M. or Mars, would never have learned of the incident and terminated Simpson because of 24 it, and the lawsuit would never have arisen. Under the circumstances of that case, it was nearly 25 certain that an agent of Ethel M. or Mars had informed Kelly of the allegations against Simpson.

1 It was for the defendant to prove otherwise, not for the plaintiff to plead as a part of her prima 2 facie case.

3 Here, by contrast, Plaintiffs specifically allege in the PSAC that the subject
4 communications were made between AA's own employees. Plaintiffs in fact note that discovery
5 provided by AA is the only reason they even became aware of such communications. The only 6 outside communications they allege or even imply are: (1) the discovery provided between the 7 parties' attorneys; and (2) Plaintiffs' own attorneys' republication of the material via subsequent, 8 post-discovery pleadings in this case. In Simpson, the trial court had dismissed based on the 9 plaintiff's failure to plead the extra-corporate nature of the communications. But the plaintiff 10 there had not even had discovery, and the nature of the communications remained solely within 11 the defendant's knowledge. It was therefore for the defendant to prove the intra-corporate nature 12 of the statements. This Court has not held Plaintiffs to such a pleading standard. Plaintiffs have 13 had discovery and have asked the Court for leave to amend based upon full discovery of the 14 nature of the communications. The proposed amendments, which appear accurately to reflect the 15 evidence discovered, affirmatively allege that the communications were purely intra-corporate.
16 If Plaintiffs have additional evidence to adduce concerning extra-corporate communications by 17 Defendant, they may adduce it in support of a new motion to amend. However, as it stands, 18 Plaintiffs have had full discovery as to the nature of the alleged defamatory statements, and the 19 intra-corporate nature of those statements appears on the face of the PSAC.
